

New Perspectives on Communicating with Visualization

From Design Inspiration to Performative Presentation

—

October 2021

Matthew Brehmer

Senior Research Staff, Tableau Research

research.tableau.com | @mattbrehmer | [mbrehmer \[at\] tableau.com](mailto:mbrehmer@tableau.com)

The background of the slide is a dark, textured image featuring various diatoms, which are microscopic algae with intricate, geometric, and often circular or elongated structures. These structures are rendered in shades of blue and yellow, creating a complex, organic pattern that serves as a visual metaphor for generative design.

Generative Design Inspiration for Glyphs with

Diatoms

Matthew Brehmer, Robert Kosara, and Carmen Hull

Tableau Research, University of Calgary

IEEE TVCG / VIS 2021 – Friday 6:00 AM PT session on Glyphs and Sets

From Jam Session to Recital

Synchronous Communication and Collaboration
Around Data in Organizations

IEEE TVCG / VIS 2021 Wed. 8:00 AM PT session on Decision Making

Matt Brehmer, Robert Kosara

The Information in our Hands

—

Matthew Brehmer
Information+ Conference 2021

vimeo.com/informationplus

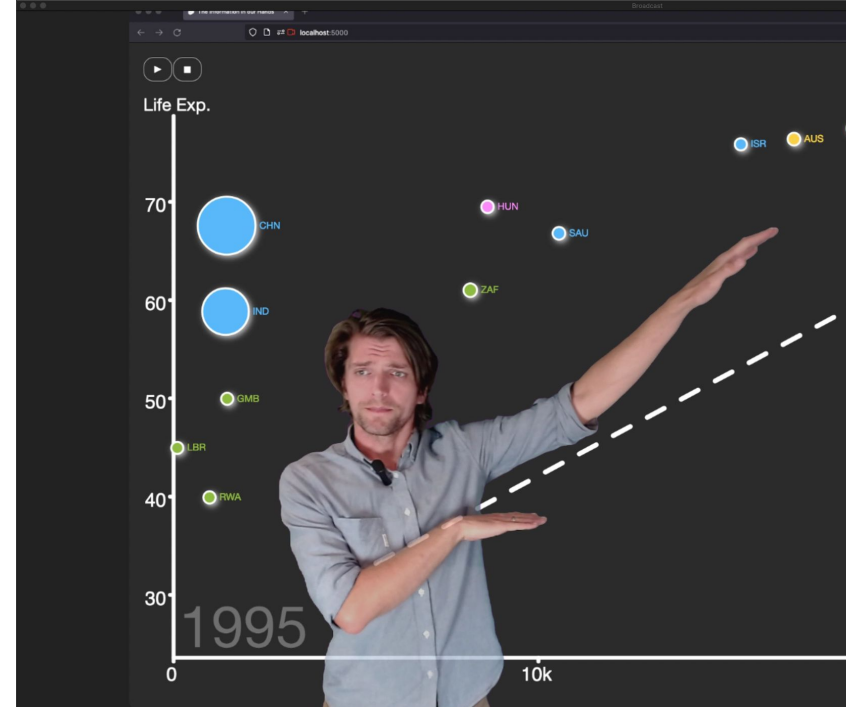

Life Exp.

1980

GDP pc

New Perspectives on Communicating with Visualization

From Design Inspiration to Performative Presentation

We're hiring interns in 2022! Questions?

Matthew Brehmer

Senior Research Staff, Tableau Research

research.tableau.com | @mattbrehmer | mbrehmer [at] tableau.com